We all learn differently. Most of us can probably recall a time when we had trouble learning something new, or perhaps a time when something came easily to us. What was it about the learning experience that didn’t work for us, and what was it that worked well?

The goal of this site is to gather stories about unique learning styles. We’d like to hear your story about how you like to learn best.

You may want to consider the following ideas as you create your story:

- Describe how you learned to do something you now do regularly
- Consider something you’ve tried to learn to do, but haven’t been able to learn in a way that satisfies you
- Think of a challenge you had while learning something new
- Describe how you taught someone else to do something
- Consider something that surprised you - for example, something you didn’t think would help you learn but did
- Describe a time you learned something when you didn’t expect to
We all learn differently. Most of us can probably recall a time when we had trouble learning something new, or perhaps a time when something came easily to us. What was it about the learning experience that didn’t work for us, and what was it that worked well?

The goal of this site is to gather stories about unique learning styles. We'd like to hear your story about how you like to learn best.

You may want to consider the following ideas as you create your story:

- Describe how you learned to do something you now do regularly
- Consider something you’ve tried to learn to do, but haven’t been able to learn in a way that satisfies you
- Think of a challenge you had while learning something new
- Describe how you taught someone else to do something
- Consider something that surprised you - for example, something you didn’t think would help you learn but did
- Describe a time you learned something when you didn’t expect to
We all learn differently. Most of us can probably recall a time when we had trouble learning something new, or perhaps a time when something came easily to us. What was it about the learning experience that didn’t work for us, and what was it that worked well?

The goal of this site is to gather stories about unique learning styles. We’d like to hear your story about how you like to learn best.

You may want to consider the following ideas as you create your story:

- Describe how you learned to do something you now do regularly
- Consider something you’ve tried to learn to do, but haven’t been able to learn in a way that satisfies you
- Think of a challenge you had while learning something new
- Describe how you taught someone else to do something
- Consider something that surprised you - for example, something you didn’t think would help you learn but did
- Describe a time you learned something when you didn’t expect to

I never liked school because I always felt like an outsider. The first time I really felt like I belonged was when I joined the Young Friends of Earth activist group. I found out that I am really good at organizing, as long as I can collaborate with others and ask for help when I need it.